

CALL FOR PAPERS

REALPAC / Ryerson Canadian Commercial Real Estate Research Symposium

Friday May 11, 2018

It is a pleasure to invite you to the first annual Canadian Commercial Real Estate Research Symposium. The symposium is organized by REALPAC and the Real Estate Management Department at the Ted Rogers School of Management, Ryerson University and will take place on Friday May 11th at the:

Ted Rogers School of Management
Ryerson University
55 Dundas Street West
Toronto, ON M5G 2C3

The principal objective of the symposium is to bring together Canadian commercial real estate practitioners, academic researchers, and policy makers to share their research and propose and discuss solutions. International academics are also welcome. The symposium will be a valuable venue for the exchange of ideas and knowledge and will be followed by a networking reception and dinner.

There is no cost this year.

The goals of the symposium are to:

- Connect and build collaboration between the Canadian academic community, the Canadian commercial real estate industry, and interested international academics and collaborators.
- Grow the body of Canadian academic real estate research, and to provide a venue for Canadian researchers to collaborate, meet, communicate and share their research outcomes.
- Provide a forum to support Canadian academics including young scholars and graduate students.
- Provide a forum to enable collaboration between academic, private sector, government, and NGO participants on real estate research topics of mutual interest.

We are pleased to invite you to submit your academic or professional practice research paper for the first annual REALPAC Ryerson Canadian Commercial Real Estate Research Symposium.

If you are not able to submit a paper for this year's symposium, we sincerely hope that you will be able to attend and contribute to the discussion and knowledge exchange.
