

The Belk College of Business
Lecturer or Clinical Assistant Professor of Real Estate

The Belk College of Business at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte is seeking to fill a lecture/clinical assistant professor position in real estate. This candidate will teach classes in real estate at both the master's and undergraduate level. The successful candidate will have experience in real estate development or a related field, excellent communication skills and a demonstrated ability to work with the business community. In addition to teaching duties the candidate will be expected to engage in applied research and service activities through the Childress Klein Center for Real Estate. The candidate must have a proven ability to communicate effectively both in writing and in person with key real estate decision makers. Candidate for the lecturer position must hold a master's degree in real estate, finance, economics, architecture, construction management, or a related field. Candidates for the clinical assistant professor position must hold either a Ph.D. or DBA in real estate, economics, construction management, or a related field, or have a Juris Doctorate.

Applications must be made electronically at <https://jobs.uncc.edu> and include a cover letter and current CV. Applicants should submit evidence of teaching effectiveness. Three letters of recommendation are required upon hire. Informal inquiries may be directed to Professor Richard Buttimer at buttimer@uncc.edu.

A review of applications will begin immediately and continue until the position is filled. Interviews will be conducted by phone or Skype. The position is contingent on final budgetary approval. Prior to hire, selected candidate is subject to a criminal background check and must provide official transcripts. The University of North Carolina at Charlotte is an affirmative action, equal opportunity employer. Women, members of minority groups, and persons with disabilities are especially encouraged to apply.
